

David H. Emadi

David Emadi currently serves as the Executive Director for the Georgia State Ethics Commission. In this role, he leads the state agency responsible for the education, investigation, and enforcement of campaign finance laws related to political candidates, lobbyists, and various interest groups.

Prior to joining the State Ethics Commission, David served as the Chief Assistant District Attorney for the Douglas Judicial Court where he managed the District Attorney's Office and prosecuted major crimes, including murder, manslaughter, and gang-related offenses. His expertise in gang prosecution earned him recognition as a Certified Expert by the National Gang Crime Research Center and led to his involvement in several high-profile jury trials. In 2017, David was honored with the "On the Rise" Award by the Fulton County Daily Report, recognizing him as one of Georgia's top lawyers under 40.

David holds a Juris Doctorate from Georgia State University College of Law and a Bachelor of Arts in English from the University of Georgia. Before his legal career, he worked as a Major League Baseball Scout for the Cincinnati Reds, evaluating top draft prospects across the Southeast.
